

FIRST NIGHT REVIEWS OF LOCAL THEATRES

"She Stoops to Conquer" Done in the New Mahner

Looking back over Mr. Bertram Forsyth's career as a theatrical director in Toronto, many persons will remember his production of "The Rivals" in the season of 1921-22 as one of the high spots. The conviction that he has a special flair for reproducing the things of the 18th Century will be strengthened by the presentation of Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," which opened last night at the New Hall of the Margaret Eaton School. It is quite obvious that Mr. Forsyth does not believe in attempting to do the plays of that century in a realistic manner. Apparently he feels that as the comedies are essentially artificial, more of their spirit can be conjured up by doing them in an artificial manner. The delightful qualities of the offering now on view are due to the amount of style that it possesses, and the dainty delicate suggestion of the generation to which the play belongs.

The 18th century feeling has not been secured by an attempt to reproduce the awkwardnesses of the 18th century staging. Instead, Mr. Forsyth has utilized an entirely modern theatrical idea. The stage for the play has been set with screens, done in neutral colors. At the back, a fireplace, a portrait on a panel or a few conventional trees suggest the location. Against these simple backgrounds, the colors and the beauties of the costumes are displayed to great advantage. Many of the episodes are concluded with bits of eloquent pantomime, done with plenty of the grand manner, and the general result is highly pictorial. In fact, nothing more pleasing to the eye has been seen locally this season than some of the groupings and color combinations in "She Stoops to Conquer."

Though the intrigues of the old comedy seem so full of artifice to the modern play-goer, the characterizations call for good acting, and the cast at the New Theatre is a strong one. The Tony Lumpkin of Edgar Stone must be mentioned first of all, because it is such an advance upon anything that Mr. Stone has done in the past. Mr. Stone makes Lumpkin a mischievous clown, but at the same time the ignorant, good-natured clod is a likeable fellow. He plays throughout with a rollicking gusto that is infectious. Of course, Mr. A. J. Rosence does Hardcastle with both dignity and subtle humor, and the two young couples are most attractively impersonated by Miss Marjorie Mason and Miss Jane Hinds, and George Patton and Morley Ayers. Without exception, the players have the necessary style and manner, and that is a considerable accomplishment for actors who are not accustomed to the comedy of manners. Mrs. Susan Leach exhibits her natural broadly comic gift as Mrs. Hardcastle, scoring in the flirtation with Hastings and in the chastising of Tony.

A great many productions of "She Stoops to Conquer" have been done in Toronto from time to time, both by professionals and non-professionals, but we cannot recall another, except perhaps that which Miss Annie Russell brought here over a decade ago, possessing as much character and charm as the one now on view at the New Theatre. As a suggestion of the artificial 18th century, it is a work of art.

Dunninger at Princess is a Master of Mystery

It is not difficult to believe in a world of magic after one has paid a visit to the Princess Theatre and witnessed the series of mystical performances which are being put on this week by Dunninger, defined as the Master Mind of Modern Mystery. Those who have a fondness for tricks which deceive the eye and the brain will be highly pleased with the demonstrations of Mr. Dunninger, particularly as he makes it plain (in words only) that there is really nothing mysterious about it all, and that it is perfectly simple, once you know how it is done. But that is the point which keeps the minds of his audiences on the narrow edge of uncertainty, for Mr. Dunninger, who is chairman of a scientific investigation committee in the United States, explains that while a large portion of his performances are given over to staging so-called spirit phenomena bordering upon the seemingly impossible, they are not spiritual at all. Perhaps the most pleasing feature of Mr. Dunninger's performance is that he duplicates the mysterious manifestations of spiritualism upon which the followers of that faith base their beliefs, and though he performs them, as he states, without the slightest aid of so-called spiritism, it is not his intention to ridicule the beliefs of that doctrine. It is, as he says, "merely an array of effects produced in an entertaining manner to convince all that the many things offered as evidence of spirit force are not accomplished by means supernatural."

There are some of the mysteries which one fancies, from a comfortable seat among the audience, that he might be able to solve if he enjoyed a seat upon the stage, but since many of these same mysteries are carried out under the critical eyes of gentlemen chosen at random from the audience, perhaps one would do well to admit that there is a super-brain back of it all. As an example of the brain magic, Mr. Dunninger stands on the stage and asks three persons in the audience to choose, mentally, three numbers of three digits each. Then he adds them, while the numbers are known only to those who have chosen them mentally, and he puts the total on a slate in plain sight of the audience. Then an attendant collects the three numbers as they are placed on slips of paper, and a fourth member of the audience adds them. And, presto, the total is the same as the total on Mr. Dunninger's slate. That is one of the least intricate of Mr. Dunninger's mental problems, which, he states frankly, represent mind reading; and when it comes to stage manifestations they are too intricate to be described, but they are no less surprising. On the whole, the magician provides a remarkably fine evening's entertainment, which is well worth the attention of even the most skeptical or the most discerning.

"The Merry Widow" Opens Third Week at Regent

"The Merry Widow" commenced the third week of its stay at the Regent Theatre yesterday. The ornate production given the screen version of the famous light opera has apparently won considerable admiration for the picture in Toronto, and it is showing signs of staying power.

AUNT HET

Vaughan Glaser Players in "Up in Mabel's Room"

Dr. Nathan Oppenheim says there is good reason for the fact that the subject of emotions always attracts the attention and why it always repays consideration. "Such things as rage, fear, love and hate, reverence and cynicism, the recognition and the lack of recognition of beauty are among the biggest facts of life; and whoever wishes to have a hand in the growth and control of his mind ought to know something of the principles that underlie them." That is probably why an emotional play, if it is true to life, helps one to an understanding of the underlying principles.

The Vaughan Glaser Players have called the play they are putting on this week "a frivolous farce," and while "Up in Mabel's Room" causes continual merriment, there is so much human wisdom underlying the laughter that one feels it something more than a farce. The play is full of just such things as Oppenheim mentions—rage, fear, love, hate, reverence and cynicism. And while it gives the audience a perfect evening of mental recreation, one cannot help but feel that it is a lack of control in each crisis which causes the undoing of each one of the actors in the drama.

The main thing to be learned perhaps is that one must not trust the evidence of one's own ears or even eyes, but as the fine young impulsive, red-haired Arthur Weldon continually urges (until he himself falls a victim to such fatal evidences) is "have faith, man, have faith!" The young child-wife Geraldine has this lesson to learn and she is taught by a worldly-wise widow (Mabel, Essington) that "the wife who isn't half a mother isn't any wife at all," and that every man is just a grown-up boy and "needs to be babied at times."

Vaughan Glaser as the suspicious and grumpy Jimmy Larchmont, is excellent. Garry Almsworth, the really nice man, capably played by Will Lloyd—Garry, the blameless, save for "one little slip," Dorothy McCullough, the little scotch-cat, but lovable Geraldine; Corinne Farrell—exactly right as Alicia Larchmont, not overdone; Violet Howard as Marie, the French maid, who said she was "legally detached from Number One, but very much attached to Number Two"; Charles Fletcher as Corliss, and Basil Loughram as Kruger—all worked together splendidly and deserved the frequent and hearty applause they got from a crowded house—A.M.

Originals in "Thumbs Up" Have an Excellent Revue

The Originals brought an excellent company to Toronto last year, but their present revue, "Thumbs Up," is an improvement on the previous show, and the opening performance at the Comedy Theatre was received with enthusiasm by a full house. Gene Pearson, the female impersonator, seems to have gained a little more avoirdupois, but makes as good an impression as before, while there is a decided improvement in the technique of his soprano singing.

Two additions add strength to the company. Stuart Callaghan is another female impersonator of note and a decided acquisition. His dancing, especially in the ballet toe dancing, leaves little to be desired, and his feminine mannerisms are effective. Jimmie Good, in blackface, also brings variety to the company.

There are two acts to the revue in which one or two of the old features have been retained. "I'm Tickled to Death," as sung by Bob Anderson, was too sure a hit to be left out, and the audience, many of whom must have heard it before, laughed as much as ever. Another of Anderson's songs, "Could Lloyd George Do It?" also goes over well. The Originals' Quartette has always been a feature of the show, and they have some new numbers which are given in their usual finished style. These include "Gypsy Laughing Song," "In the Gloaming" and "Raking in the Hay."

The cast that includes some of the best local players presents "The Cherry Orchard," with Miss Grae Webster, Miss Agnes Muldrew, Miss Margaret MacLennan, Miss Phillip Morris, Mr. Arthur Pennell and Miss Margaret MacLennan. Give it most exciting roles. While there are excellent individual performances, it is the team play that calls for special commendation. The production is one that with unfettered naturalism that the play demands, even in scenes that seem to unemotional Canadians to be overdone. The performance is surprisingly well maintained from start to finish, and the production continues help to give the production a true quality. "The Cherry Orchard" is a fine achievement for any non-professional group.

PRIZES ARE PRESENTED

The Margaret Eaton School, Department of Physical Education, last night, for the first time, held its own commencement exercises, and presented diplomas and certificates to 12 girl graduates. The New Theatre of the Margaret Eaton School provided ample room for the many guests, and provided a happy setting for the exercises. The Principal, Bertram Forsyth, B.A., acted as Chairman during the evening, and closed the program with a delightfully informal address, in which he urged those students leaving the school to keep the blessed spirit of childhood.

In his inspiring address to the graduates Rev. D. Bruce Macdonald, M.A., LL.D., gave some excellent advice on keeping satisfactory and happy relations with their fellow-beings, and stressed the importance of the personal equation. "It is wise to remember," he continued, "that the value of the personal equation need not remain fixed. It is quite possible by honest endeavor to add qualities that strengthen and lose the qualities that weaken."

Physical Education.

"Physical education is filling a very urgent need in our educational system," stated Miss Charlotte Ross, head of the literature department, in her farewell remarks to the graduating class. Miss Ross reviewed briefly the increase in interest in physical education in the past few years, and warned the graduates and qualified teachers against narrowness. Miss Mary G. Hamilton, head of the physical education department, told something of the splendid achievements of the past year, touching briefly on the work at Camp Tanamakoon, where a month was spent by 32 students last autumn.

Greetings From Founder.

Greetings from Mrs. Timothy Eaton, the beloved mother of the school, were brought by her daughter, Mrs. C. E. Burden, who presented the diplomas and prizes. To Miss Janet S. Among the parties being given in honor of Miss Ruth Ratcliffe, who is to be married to Mr. Francis Burnham on June 6 are Mrs. Cawthra Elliott, a dinner for the bridal party; Miss Mildred Brock, a tea; Miss Florence Cook, a miscellaneous shower. The bridge club gave a dinner at the Queen's Hotel; Mrs. Elder, a handkerchief shower and tea; Miss Iris Lane, a tea; Miss Maud McQuillan, a tea; Miss Florence Cook, a bridge; Mrs. Edward Wood is giving a tea next Thursday, and Mrs. J. V. Ratcliffe is giving a trousseau tea today for her daughter.

The nurses in training of the Women's College Hospital gave a delightful party at the Graduate Nurses' Club last night in honor of the graduating class of 1928 when the hospital staff were special guests. The nurses provided an original and amusing program of music, class songs and other features, concluding with a dance. The members of the graduating class present were: Miss Grace Wilshire, Miss Vera B. Allen, Miss Nora Weber, Miss E. Laura Blaney, Miss Maybelle E. May, Miss Thora M. Hawkes, Miss Kathleen Mullen and Miss Jessie G. Whitelaw.

The Margaret Carnian Eaton Chapter gave a delightful bridge and musical yesterday afternoon in Sherbourne Club House. Muriel Farrell Donnellan, harpist, gave a splendid recital, which was much enjoyed. The tea table, which was presided over by Mrs. W. P. Playter and Miss Carson, was pretty with spring flowers. The assistants were Miss Eric Harvey, Miss Ruth Playter, Miss Mildred Eaton, Miss B. Jones, Miss Marion Patterson, Miss Mabel McCauley and Miss Alberta Robinson. Mrs. B. B. Dutton, the Regent, received the guests.

Toronto Canoe Club held their opening summer dance last evening. This affair was unusually successful, and being the first of a number of dances to be held throughout the summer, every effort was put forth to make it complete in every respect. Outstanding among those in attendance were the following: Commodore Colonel and Mrs. E. H. Mims, Vice-Commodore and Mrs. H. H. Fullerton, Rear Commodore and Mrs. W. H. Adams and Miss Pauline Adams, Mr. and Mrs. W. Digby, Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Gourlay, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Kent, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Johnstone, Mr. J. Lavelle and Mr. P. Manley.

EATON GIRLS HOLD MAY DAY PAGEANT

Miss Blanche Phillips Crowned Queen in Picturesque Event

MANY SEE SPECTACLE

When a May Queen is crowned at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, the necessity for mother "calling her early" is obviated, and thus probably the only trying aspect of this time-honored ceremony disappears. In any case, the delightful May Day pageant presented by the Eaton Girls' Club at "Ardwold" on Saturday afternoon gave no hint of any strain or anxiety on the part of those participating. It was an outburst of youthful exuberance—perfectly sincere, though just a little strained, reflecting, as it did, a quieter and more dignified era, and recalling "Merrie Olde England" when life was less complex and simple joys sufficed.

Miss Blanche Phillips, who was the central figure of the pageant, and whose crowning as Queen of the May brought it to a picturesque close, achieved her proud position through the vote of her business associates. A number of the Sales Audit Office of the T. Eaton Company, Miss Phillips had won the hearts of so many of her fellow-workers that a vote of $50 in favor of her coronation was returned, and it was a girl not only beautiful in face and form, but also lovely in character and disposition, who received the May Day honors.

The pageant, which was written and directed by John Brockie of the General Office, consisted of four scenes, the first one giving a glimpse of English life about a village inn; the second depicting a lively event in a glade in Sherwood Forest, with Friar Tuck, Robin Hood, and a messenger from King Richard as chief characters; the third showing a village fair on Nottingham Green; and the fourth displaying the pretty ceremony of "Crowning the Queen." Several attractive dances added to the brightness of the pageant, and the many-colored costumes of the milkmaids, shepherds and woodsmen, together with the more elaborate dress of Earl, Sheriff, Bishop, and members of the official class made a lovely picture. The pageant was enacted on the wide, smooth lawns of Ardwick, the flowering shrubs, lacy trees, and the perfection of a summer day affording an ideal setting.

An orchestra under the direction of W. Sander Kellett, was in attendance, and among the large audience that enjoyed the event was Lady Eaton, who, assisted by her sister, Miss McCrae, was, as usual, a beneficent hostess.

Weddings

MACLEAN HOWARD—MERRITT.

On Saturday afternoon a fashionable wedding and one of the prettiest in detail took place in Christ's Church, Deer Park, when Emily C. A., daughter of the late Mr. Louis Merritt of St. Catharines and of Mrs. Charles H. Rogers, was married to Major Vaughan Maclean Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Maclean Howard. The beauty of the wonderful May day was accentuated within the church by the magnificent spring flowers massed in the building adding beauty and color to the smartly attired folk, who attended the ceremony. The walls of the church vibrated with full rich harmony, when Mr. P. Holland played the wedding music and the chimes merrily pealed out congratulations to the bride and groom. Palms and spring flowers graced the chancel and guest pews were marked off with high baskets filled with snapdragons and carnations and white ribbons. The officiating clergymen were Rev. Canon Woodcock and Rev. Scott Maclean Howard, uncle of the groom. The ushers, Mr. W. A. Maclean Howard, cousin of the groom; Col. Baptist Johnston, Mr. F. A. Warren and Mr. Bertram MacGrimmon. The flower girls came next; Misses Elizabeth and Ann Seymour of St. Catharines, cousins of the bride, wearing dainty frilly frocks of pink silk and carrying and carrying old-fashioned bouquets of lily of the valley, a rose and western part of the province, one of the coolest spots, its maximum temperature being 74. Kingston in the east was similarly comfortable, its high point being 76. While the day was undoubtedly a shade more comfortable than its predecessor, it nevertheless was one which made coolness a most practical ambition and one which the public actively pursued. The watering places along the lake shore and at the Island were well patronized and neighborhood picnic places entertained large crowds. Motoring and trips on the water also were popular and the journey across the Lake to view the illumination of Niagara Falls took on added attractiveness because of the heat of the day.

Death Near Picton.
Special to The Mail and Empire.
Kingston, Ont., June 8.—A death from the extreme heat is reported. Miss Flake, daughter of Mr. Irvine Flake, High Shore Road, near Picton, had been assisting putting out tomato plants. She complained of not feeling well and went to the house, a short distance away, and shortly afterwards expired.

Moderately Warm at Kingston.
Special to The Mail and Empire.
Kingston, Ont., June 8.—While other parts of Ontario are sweltering in torrid heat, Kingston is quietly enjoying temperatures that seem about impossible at the present time. Friday, Saturday and Sunday the temperature ranged from 74 to 81; and to-day, the hottest of the series, it was 85 degrees. Kingston's temperature throughout the season is always from 10 to 15 below that of any place in the province.

Trenton Man Succumbs.
Special to The Mail and Empire.
Trenton, Ont., June 8.—The hot wave which is sweeping over Ontario and the northern states causing death after death, added one more to its long list, when about 3 o'clock this afternoon E. Wheatcroft succumbed to the heat. The old gentleman, who was in his 82nd year, was returning home from the post office when affected. Several citizens, who were standing across the street, noticed him stumbling, but before they could reach him he fell. His head struck the edge of the entrance to McAuley's clothing store, cutting a big deep gash therein. The body was carried into Shurles' drug store, and Dr. Driscoll summoned. The doctor pronounced death due to the heat.

No Relief in Prescott.
Special to The Mail and Empire.
Prescott, Ont., June 8.—No relief has been experienced in Prescott from the intense heat wave, making the seventh consecutive day of the hottest weather ever recorded in the Fort town. The mercury registered 90 degrees in the shade to-day.

Montreal Perspires.
Canadian Press.
Montreal, June 8.—A temperature of 87.8 and humidity of 82 (a high figure) hung over a windless Montreal to-day and conspired to make the inhabitants pant and perspire. To-night the city retired to rest with the promise of continued high temperature and nocturnal thunderstorms.

Death in Woodstock.
Special to The Mail and Empire.
Woodstock, Ont., June 8.—Death came very suddenly to Mrs. J. L. Wright, of this city, at an early hour this morning. Mrs. Wright had been on a motor trip to Hamilton Beach Sunday with her husband and family, and it is thought that the excessive heat and the trip were a trifle too much for her, although she felt no ill effects when she returned home. However, on this morning another sweltering day was in prospect, but this afternoon a series of showers cooled the atmosphere and these were followed by a brisk breeze from Lake Superior which sent the thermometer down to 60 and the people about the streets are clad in sweaters. Yesterday several workmen at the steel plant were overcome by the heat and a woman fainted on the street.

SCHOOL TO SPECIALIZE IN THE DRAMATIC ART

Bertram Forsyth Appointed as Principal of Margaret Eaton School.

The appointment of Bertram Forsyth, of Hart House Theatre, to the Principalship of the Margaret Eaton School and the reopening of the school on October 5th next in the Margaret-Eaton extension building at the corner of Yonge and McGill Streets, are announced as the features of the Margaret Eaton School reorganization. Plans have been completed by those in charge of the school to give instruction in literature and dramatic art, of which department Mr. Forsyth will be director and Mr. Dixon Wagner assistant director, and in physical education, of which department Mary G. Hamilton will be director. Included in the course will be lectures upon the history and literature of the drama, dramatic training, decorative art and costumes, English literature, rhythm and expression, and voice training. Lecturers will be appointed for these various subjects and it is also intended to secure an instructor in eurythmics with a diploma from the school of Jacques Dalcroze, of Geneva.

During the term a program of plays open to subscribers and to the general public will be given by the school, in which the students will take part as they qualify.

Irish Hunter to be Seen at Toronto Horse Show

Conspicuous among the fine hunters which have been bred and raised in Ireland, and which will be seen in action when the Toronto Horse Show opens a four-day gathering at the Eglinton Show Grounds to-morrow afternoon, is Dunraven, owned by R. J. Fleming, which will be handled in the jumping and hunter contests by Murray Fleming. Accustomed to take the stone fences of his native country, Dunraven makes light of the timber obstacles in a show ring, and if he jumps as well in real contests as he has been doing in trials he will go far at the coming show. Mrs. Strathearn Hay schooled Farnatic, a former champion of Sir Adam Beck's great string, yesterday afternoon, and the old campaigner jumped like a deer in spite of his long winter rest. The harness pony classes for youngsters has proved a great drawing card, friendship on the part of the churches was stressed. The Assembly then expressed belief that the League of Nations, enlarged to include all nations, offered the best security. The Assembly, however, would not pronounce that all war was a crime, although believing all war originated in crime. "The sacrifice of life," it was stated, "may be required in the service of Him who said, 'Justice and judgment are the foundations of His Throne.'"

A recommendation of the Judicial Committee declaring as authentic the minutes of the present clerk of the Montreal Presbytery, was endorsed, this action being necessary on account of the former non-concurrent clerk, who had been dismissed, refusing to give up the original minutes.

Rev. Dr. Farmer, president of the Lord's Day Alliance, and Rev. Dr. W. A. Rochester, secretary, briefly spoke of the work of the Alliance. The former declared that the Alliance had preserved a wonderful poise in its work, and that its great object was to secure the largest liberty for all. Dr. Rochester, referring to the recent Privy Council decision, said that in effect the principles of the Lord's Day Act had been thrown into the Provincial arenas. Manitoba was now virtually deprived of the Act.

General Board's Report.

Some of the main features of the report of the General Board follow:—

Budget givings of congregations showed a decrease of less than two per cent., but this was more than overtaken by revenue from other sources. The deficit on the common budget was reduced by $180,000, and at the end of the financial year stood at $148,159. While this financial improvement was reassuring, it was due in considerable measure to the sacrifice of work which a living church could not repeat or continue without irreparable loss, stated the report.

The average annual rate of giving per communicant to the schemes of the church for the five-year period prior to the adoption

Mabel Terry Lewis and Aubrey Smith are to support Ethel Barrymore in "The Constant Wife."

Marguerite Rissler, who played "Aloma of the South Seas" last season, is to star in "Naked," which Augustin Duncan is producing.

Cosmo Hamilton has dramatized "His Majesty the King"—it was a novel in the beginning—and the Dramatists' Theatre will produce it in New York.

A London newspaper says that when Somerset Maugham's "The Letter" is acted here Judith Anderson will have the leading role. Mr. Maugham, incidentally, is another English author who has recently reached America. In addition to "The Letter," his "The Constant Wife" also will be produced in New York soon. As already announced, Ethel Barrymore will appear in it.

It will be Peggy Wood, in all probability, who will have the Jenny Lind role in "The Nightingale," which the Shuberts are getting ready to produce. Incidentally, a play by Miss Wood and Samuel Merwin, tried by a stock company a few seasons ago, is presently to re-emerge in musical form. It was originally called "Artists' Life," and the musicalization will probably be known as "The Waltz King." Efrem Zimballist, according to the present plan, will write the score.

It seems to be now fairly certain that Eddie Cantor is lost to the stage—for a season at least. The movie houses can offer, for "personal appearances," far greater salaries than even Mr. Ziegfeld can pay, and accordingly Mr. Cantor will personally appear. All of this will be in connection with his picturization of "Kid Boots," news of which belongs properly on the film page. He will also, in all probability, do another film before he goes back to the stage.

The closing of "Sour Grapes" at the Longacre, after a disappointing run, makes the immediate future plans of its star, Alice Brady, a matter of news interest once again. Miss Brady is being talked of for the leading role—that of "the most beautiful girl ever tried for murder" in the State of Illinois—in the coming production of "Chicago," the ironic melodrama by a young newspaper woman named Maurine Watkins, but she seems definitely to have decided against it. What is more likely, is that she will appear for a series of matinees at least in "Granite," the new English drama by Clemence Dane.

Henrietta Crossman will be seen in Keith-Albee vaudeville in a playlet called "The Youth's Companion," adapted from "Kept."

Holbrook Blinn is rehearsing in the Wodehouse adaptation of the Molnar play, "Spiel im Schloss," for which no suitable English title has been found.

Bertram Forsyth Stages "The Humble" in New York

The silent departure of Bertram Forsyth from our midst has filled a great many of his admirers with regret. As a matter of fact, he did not expect to go. Last year the name of Margaret, Eaton School blazed forth on the artistic skyline as it has never done before as a result of the activities of New Theatre, and Mr. Forsyth's name will always be associated in the memories of those who are interested in the best things of the drama with that brief but thoroughly worthwhile enterprise. It was the intention of Mr. Forsyth to carry on local classes in acting, and to avail himself of such opportunities for making non-professional productions as are sure to arise in a community where the little theatre movement is as strong as in Toronto, but fate stepped in and altered his plans. He was invited to New York to direct a production of a drama entitled "The Humble," which had its premiere about a week ago with Basil Sydney, Mary Ellis and Sydney Greenstreet in the leading roles, and our own Wallace House, one of the products of Mr. Forsyth's training in Toronto, playing a minor part.

"The Humble" is a dramatization that the late Laurence Irving, the younger son of Sir Henry Irving, made of Dostoevsky's novel, "Crimes and Punishment." There is a scene in that novel which has always appealed to the imagination of emotional actors. It is the episode where the wretched student, Rodion, is drawn back to the scene of his crime, where he hacked the miserable old Gromoff to death, and is there forced, by the clever and suspicious magistrate, to go over the story of the murder step by step. By this means the cunning old Bezak hopes to force a confession and clear up the mystery. Sometime in the 90's Richard Mansfield played a version of the novel, which was known as "Rodion, the Student," but it was not among his successes. In 1910 Laurence Irving wrote his version of it, to which he gave the title "The Unwritten Law." He appeared in it with success in the Garrick Theatre, London, and later brought the play to Canada as part of the repertoire to be used in the tour that he made early in 1914, which ended with the tragedy of the actor-author's death. E. H. Sothern tried the same play, to which he gave the title "The Fool Hath Said in His Heart," but he was not particularly happy in the role of Rodion. Of course the reason why a new title has to be used for Irving's play in New York is that the unwritten law has always been associated, over here, with crimes of passion and infidelity.

The plot of "The Humble" is fairly well known. Rodion Raskolnikov, a Russian student, an intellectual and sentimental pessimist, murders an unspeakable landlord, from motives that are entirely quixotic. He has just written a pamphlet justifying homicide, and acts on his own theory. Anyway, the dramatist has made old Gromoff quite worthy of death. Two laborers are arrested, charged with the murder, but Dr. Bezak, a relentless examining magistrate, suspects Rodion. The great scene of the play is that in which Bezak attempts to force a confession. He only failed because one of the laborers claimed the guilt. In the end Rodion refuses to let the other man suffer for the crime, and it is suggested that all will be well after he has served a short term of imprisonment. The play is rather theatrical and old-fashioned, but J. Brooks Atkinson says in the New York Times: "If 'The Humble' were regarded merely as play craftsmanship—

Our Special Fan at the M

There is a man named Will H. Hays who has been given the task, at a perfectly enormous salary, of keeping the American movies sweet and pure, so that they will not soil the fragrant, unsophisticated minds of us who are fans. I have been wondering for some time now when he was going to begin, but I find that his task consists of vetoing certain stories and plays that producers might desire to picture. For example, in 1925, he put the ban of his displeasure on thirteen dramas that had been presented on Broadway during the season of 1924-25. The plays were "They Knew What They Wanted," which won the Pulitzer Prize that season, "Desire Under the Elms," "The Firebrand," "The Guardsman," "Rain," "The Harem," "Ladies of the Evening," "White Cargo," "The Werewolf," "The Shame Woman," "Rust," "Simon Called Peter" and "The Good Bad Woman."

To my surprise I find that, according to Will H. Hays, the season of 1925-26 in New York was much less carnal, much less calculated to defile the movies than the preceding year. In 1926 Mr. Hays put the ban on only five plays, "Bride of the Lamb," "Kongo," "The Green Hat," "Lulu Belle" and "The Shanghai Gesture," which would seem to mean that Broadway was smelling more than twice as sweet, or perhaps less than half as sour.

"The Ace of Cads."

Now, though Michael Arlen was not permitted to enter the movies wearing "The Green Hat," which seems to be much the most becoming thing that he has worn in public to date, it does not mean that Mr. Arlen has not been permitted to use the screen to present life as he sees it. "The Ace of Cads" is a silent drama written especially for the movies by Mr. Arlen, and I have a feeling that even if you did not know the name of the author in advance you would guess it without more ado. There was never any man so much like himself as Mr. Arlen is always like Mr. Arlen.

The trouble with Michael Arlen is that most of his men and women, moving in the best circles though they are, seem to lack as completely the niceties of good breeding. They are smart enough, and sometimes too smart by far, but they always have a suggestion of the boulder about them. There are so many cads in "The Ace of Cads" that it keeps you guessing which is going to be the ace and which merely the deuce. That is the main defect of what is rather an interesting plot.

According to Michael Arlen, two brother officers loved the same girl. A was a wealthy rake, and B was a poor bounder. A promised the girl that he was through with women because he was about to marry her. B contrived to arrange a party so that A was romping with two notorious women in a private dining room when the girl came and caught him. When the orchestra in the restaurant played Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" A made such a scene that he was cashiered from the army. Now, I have heard Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" played in a manner that would justify almost any line of conduct. However, A did not take that line of defence. After these experiences he always behaved abominably when the girl, now married to B, was round. He carried on with creatures, and all
